SUMMARY OF EVENTS OF THE PAST WEEK

CANADIAN

The price of wheat at the beginning of the week was $1.32. C.P.R. stock stood at 149 1/2.

In the course of the Dominion election in Edmonton, F. W. Ewing, K.C., made charges of dishonesty against the Hon. Charles Stewart while he was Premier of Alberta. Mr. Stewart, in reply, stated that he was ready to resign if investigation showed that he was in any way implicated in any such thing, and Premier Greenfield has announced that an inquiry will be held in connection with the matter by the Alberta government.

Doctor William Egbert, the new Lieutenant-Governor, has been sworn into office by Chief Justice Harvey. He takes the place of Dr. Brett, whose term of office as Lieutenant-Governor has just expired.

Very windy weather has prevailed over Eastern Canada, and navigation on the Ottawa river has been interrupted for a few days.

It is expected that the Alberta government will in a few days announce the date of the by-elections to be held for the Provincial parliament consequent on the resignation of several members who have contested seats in the recent Dominion election.

The new Canadian National oil-driven car made a run from Montreal to Winnipeg in slightly over 30 hours, thus beating the time of the ordinary steam train by no less than 9 hours. A start to stop speed of 46 miles an hour was averaged. The car was on to Vancouver after a five minute stop. The run is being made as a test of the car's reliability. It has accommodations for 60 passengers and some baggage. If this trial is a fair example of what such cars can do, it may be the beginning of a great improvement in the trans-Canada passenger service.

BRITISH AND IMPERIAL

A general election is being held today in New Zealand.

A proposal is on foot for the Prince of Wales to visit the Irish Free State. It is thought that there would be little or no opposition to his visit and that the contrary theory would be considerable enthusiasm.

The Liberal party in Great Britain appear to be again putting forward proposals for an alliance with the Labour party against the Conservatives. The present Conservative government has a majority in the house of over 200 over the combined Labour and Liberal parties.

The Empire Exhibition at Wembley seems certain to result in a heavy loss financially and the guarantee will be called on for nearly 15% of their guarantee. On the other hand, it is hoped that there will be indirect gains made in respect of the trade as the result of the Exhibition.

There are reports that Mr. Baldwin, British Premier, has been less than cordial to his party on account of his alleged leanings towards socialist measures, but the reports do not appear to come from disinterested sources. The Conservative majority being so large, it is inevitable that certain differences should appear in the party on minor issues, but there is no evidence of anything like serious opposition to Mr. Baldwin from his own followers.

A new device is being tried in the Royal Air Force in Britain intended to prevent the stalling of aeroplanes through their speed being reduced below the limit of flying safety. It is said that this device will come into action on such occasions and start the machine descending at the correct angle to avoid a crash.

The Turks have refused to appear before the Hague court of international justice in connection with the Mosul arbitration trial on the ground that the question at issue is quite a legal and political. This is in accordance with the Turkish attitude throughout that if there was any likelihood of the decision going against them, they would not accept the League's arbitration.

Great Britain is reported to be watching with close interest the rumored gathering of Turkish troops on the Mosul frontier. There is some talk of their having crossed French territory in Syria in order to reach the frontier, but this is quite uncertain, and in view of the fact that much of the news from Europe at present is coming from sources obviously anti-French and anti-imperial, such statements must be accepted with much reserve.

It is a matter for grave doubt whether Turkish resources and transportation facilities will allow of the maintenance of a really large army on the Mosul frontier.

In the English municipal election held this week the Socialist-Labour party has made substantial but not overwhelming gains. The Conservatives have been very keenly fought, the issue being substantially that of increased municipal expenditure and public services against economy in public expenditure and reduction of local taxes.

FOREIGN

The quarrel between Greece and Bulgaria seems to have been brought to an end, and the Greek troops withdrawn as the result of the League of Nations' intervention. Representatives of the League are in the Balkans endeavoring to adjust the frontier settlement between Greece and Bulgaria, and one plan proposed to prevent similar incidents is to have a demilitarized zone on each side of

NOTABLE ELECTION RESULTS

Some notable results in the recent election are:

The defeat of the Premier, Mr. Mackenzie King, and seven of his cabinet ministers.

The election of R. B. Bennett in Calgary and the defeat of W. M. Davidson, the editor of the Calgary Alberta.

The election of Robert Rogers in Winnipeg.

The election of Henri Bourassa, the Quebec Nationalist, as an Independent in Quebec.

LOCAL NEWS

W. E. Payne, K.C., has again been elected a benchor of the Law Society of Alberta.

The Windsor garage is prepared to give winter storage for batteries, service guaranteed.

Some of the "Sackcloth and Scarlet," shown at the La Par last week, were filmed at Lake Louise.

Mrs. W. J. Stophan gave a small party to the school teachers last week on the occasion of Miss G. Smith leaving school to get married.

RED DEER'S RE-ELECTED MEMBER

ALFRED SPEAKMAN, M.P.

Senator Sir James Loughheed died.

Sir James Loughheed, the well-known Calgary senator, died in Ottawa on Monday. He had been the Conservative leader in the Senate for a considerable time. He came to Calgary in 1888, when the C.P.R. first reached that point, and practised law in the city. He was a large property owner in the city and laid the foundation of his fortune in Calgary land.

THE LOCAL CONTEST

The following are the total numbers of votes received by the three candidates in the Red Deer Riding:

A. SPEAKMAN	3608
R. MCKERCHER	2346
J. G. LaFRANCE	2033

There are still a few polls to be heard from, but these will not materially affect the result.

THE BEST JOKE OF THE ELECTION

Our bright little contemporary, the Edmonton Journal, is fond of quoting The News in its extracts from its weekly press. In last week's issue The News said that thanks to the use of the broadcasting device more people than ever before have been able to hear the chief leaders in person.

REV. G. McCOMAS' FAREWELL SERVICES

Next Sunday will be the last on which the Rev. G. McComas will officiate as Rector of St. Luke's Anglican Church, as he will be leaving next week to take charge in Marquette, Michigan. The congregation will hear with regret his farewell sermon, and will extend to him, Mrs. McComas and to Archie, their good wishes for their well-being and happiness in Marquette, which is fortunately not far away. They need wish only a night of their friends here.

FUMIGATING GREEN-HOUSES WITH TOBACCO

Tobacco has other uses than through the pipe, and some plants, such as Aspidistra, Begonia, and others, are automatically at all the public houses on the way home from market, and called the "Worming" of the house, under a mistaken idea that it could get its batteries charged there.

THE WEATHER

In the last half of last week the weather was beautiful, mild and sunny, and the snow that had been melted. It went somewhat colder on Monday, and at night a hard frost set in, but the sun was out on Tuesday, and only a little snow fell throughout the night, and Tuesday morning was clear and bright, and of going to press it is clear and fairly cold.

There is a grim story afloat about Archie Pyke's car. It seems that the other day Archie drove up Galt Avenue and pulled up at Mayor John's house. He got out of the car, leaving the engine running, and went into the store, whereupon the car moved in and slowly and steadily toward the street with no visible driver at the wheel, and a graceful turn and attempted to get into the Western General store. No damage resulted, but the question is whether the car is haunted or whether it is merely developing habits similar to those of the thirty-seven cars that have been reported to stop automatically at all the public houses on the way home from market, and called the "Worming" of the house, under a mistaken idea that it could get its batteries charged there.

There is a grim story afloat about Archie Pyke's car. It seems that the other day Archie drove up Galt Avenue and pulled up at Mayor John's house. He got out of the car, leaving the engine running, and went into the store, whereupon the car moved in and slowly and steadily toward the street with no visible driver at the wheel, and a graceful turn and attempted to get into the Western General store. No damage resulted, but the question is whether the car is haunted or whether it is merely developing habits similar to those of the thirty-seven cars tain cakes and cakes are still missing. First, to give the boys an appetizer, which was later found to be needless, as fast game of "Puzzle" was played outside. In this game it is required to run around in a large circle, obeying the commands of the leader. In the centre, until this person blows a whistle. Then everyone freezes. Various grotesque statues are made. At the end of this had dwindled down to one player, the others having moved during their freezing. The winner, and everybody went to the shack. Here the boys listened to the wisdom stored in the leader for the different patrol leaders for a while.

About this time the duty patrol went upstairs and started to cut cake and sandwich, some of them in their stomachs. At the Scoutmaster's "Cozy" everyone was ready and willing to form a circle and prepare to receive their share of the cake. The dogs, sniffing with delighted noses the odors coming from within the shack, stood outside in an expectant row, and howled appealingly. The Scoutmaster overlooked, either. Sandwiches came first, and went quickly. Cocoa disappeared with equal suddenness. These two items had found their way to the proper places, one of the easiness cause down the stairs bearing aloft a heaping box of beautiful cake. He was immediately set upon by the reporter, and high shouts of protest arose. "More cake, more cake," seemed to be the continual cry, and was answered speedily by the Scoutmaster.

At the end of a ten-minute period, punctuated now and then by shouted protests, the Scoutmaster, who had been giving out the cake, turned to the boys and said: "Now, boys, I have a special offering to the dog. Now was heard a rustling of paper, and when eyes were turned upon the glimmers of red seen among the chairs, the Scoutmaster greeted the appearance of these apples, and everybody impatiently set upon the carriers and fought for one. At this moment the Scoutmaster spoke and told them that these first apples were not to be eaten right away, but were going to hang them to strings and bite at them. He also added that anyone eating an apple would be disqualified for the game. We found, upon investigation, that the number of disqualified exceeded the opposition.

At the end of a merry and noisy evening spent in a hot and steamy shack, the meeting was closed in the usual way, and scouts started for home, each looking a little fatter than when he arrived.

The reporter, who was seen departing hurriedly from the shack with a large bundle under his arm, has been asked concerning the mysterious disappearance of a certain cake, which possessed an icing of unusual thickness. He looks into the camera, offers sympathy, and answers the questions thus: "It is gone," and then he reminiscently smacks his lips and adds: "But not forgotten."

At 7.30 p.m. on Friday evening, Oct. 30th, the sound of a horn brought the members of the Second Red Deer Troop of Scouts to the places in the horseshoe formation.

After saluting the flag, Kelly took charge of the game and found a lot of use later on in the evening. The guards should have also been commanded to whistle continually, as cering of what was in the paper bag on the shelf. The Patrols in their corners were busy with compass, compass, and bandages for half an hour. When they were asked which patrol could get through a small hoop in the shortest time, the boys were given an strenuous work they were given an apple to eat, and they were shown their ability to do that. One Scout had the pleasure of telling the S.M. that he was showing a bad example by not having his boots brushed, and his patrol got a point for observation. The S.M. wishes to explain that he did not touch his shoes for that very reason, to see if anyone would notice it. The Chickadees are still in the lead in the patrol competition, and it will take the Crews some catching up before Christmas.

At 9 p.m. the boys made the promise of a Scout and also promised to do nothing a Scout should not do on Saturday. One boy would not do this, but we hope he thought over it before doing any damage.

At the Council fire we sang songs and told ghost stories and ate apples. 9.30 came all too soon, and after a short prayer the meeting closed.

NO. 2 PACK WOLF CUBS

To obtain the second star a Cub must pass the following tests: Signaling, to know the alphabet in Morse or semaphore; know eight points of the compass; recite the first two verses of "O Canada"; have a dollar in the savings bank; make a model or set of drawings of fables; clean a pair of boots; lay and light a fire; fold clothes; run a message; make a model of a house; know the bandages a Cub wears; have at least six months service as a Wolf Cub. All this seems a lot for a Cub to do, but if it is worth his salt he will be wearing both stars inside of a few months, and it is worth the trouble, as he can go in for proficiency badges. These proficiency badges are awarded for signalling, collecting stamps, etc., drawing or modelling, wood working and carpentering, first aid, swimming, games. Boys in No. 2 pack who have won stars are: Ernest, Nicholls, Ralph, Derry, Bill, Payne. Those who have won stars are: Alec Patterson, John, Kitching, Vernon, Will, Jack, Ainsworth, Bonnie Ainsworth, Bob Lancaster, Ed, Lindmark. There are several tenders ready to be tested for first star, and some second star boys ready to take the test for badges. A night will be set on which tests will be carried out. The date will be made known through this column. All Cubes should watch this news each week and cut out these notes for reference.

Cubs are asked to fill in the names of the scout referred to in the following story, and to practise making the knots as well.

Jack and his father were preparing to go on a vacation. As they were going to spend some time in the "bush," they were putting their kits into bundles to be carried on pack ponies. Jack wanted to tie the bundles up, as he was good at knots. He told his dad he learned to make them in the Wolf Cubs. "All right," said his dad, "but mind you tie them securely."

"Sure I will," said Jack, and he set to tie a light rope. He had a bundle of bedding, "I'll tie this by a knot," he said, "that's the best knot I use for that purpose."

"Why?" asked his dad. "Because it is so strong," said Jack. "We have lots of rope," said Jack's dad. "It is in short lengths of different thickness."

"That's all right," said Jack, "we can tie the light rope to the thicker one by a knot, that will hold them." Soon they had every thing ready to pack on the ponies, which were in the corral, and Jack went to get them. He brought them to where the packs were lying, and fastened them to the hitching post by a knot.

"Why do you use that?" said his dad to Jack. "Because it is the best knot I know," said Jack. "So they proceeded to pack the ponies, and when the packs were on, his dad said to Jack, 'You seem to know all about knots; tell me how I should secure the loads on the ponies now.' 'I know,' said Jack, 'by the D—' H—' 'Good for you, Sonnie,' said his dad, 'you sure learned something in the Wolf Cubs, and you will be useful on this trip.' As Jack looked around to see if his dad had forgotten anything, his glance fell on a short length of rope, and rather than leave it, he fastened it to a loop of rope on the packs by a knot.

"What will that be handy for?" said his dad. "To hold on to if I get tired and need a little help," said Jack.

Sporting News

During a recent race in France a number of the horses got in a muck and fell. The jockey who was riding the favorite jumped up, mounted the horse nearest him—which he thought was his own mount—and maced down the track to win the race amid the cheers and jeers of the thousands who were watching. The jockey was amazed to find at the winning post that he was not riding the favorite, but in the excitement of the accident had grabbed a rank outsider at 15 to 1.

SCHOOL NOTES

The pupils of North Red Deer School made a presentation to Miss MacDuff on her transfer to the Central Public School as a mark of their appreciation of her efforts. Miss MacDuff has been successful in North Red Deer as she was at the Parish Hall in obtaining discipline in her classes at a high level while retaining the regard of her pupils. This is one of the marks of a really good, efficient teacher.

Miss Gertrude Smith ended her school teaching last Friday and said farewell to her pupils. She is being married this week. Her pupils gave her a very sincere and hearty send-off, and will most certainly regret her going, as she has been so universally popular with everybody.

Miss MacDuff is moving over from the North Red Deer school to take Miss G. Smith's place, but Miss Smith, who was to take the North Red Deer school, has fallen ill in Calgary and the place has therefore been given by the board to Miss Conquest, of Calgary, who has been working in the High School. It is considered that the strong hands must be available in due time to curb the excesses of the overabundance of the lusty High School pupils. The new teacher will take subjects of science and part of the mathematics.

The canvass for membership of the Red Cross last week in the Red Deer district was a success. It resulted in 153 junior members being got, and four seniors. This is quite good. The Red Cross work is of great value in the community, and it is right that the school pupils should take at least some interest in it.

There were wild and weird results produced in the schools as the result of Halloween.

In the High School one room had the desks altered in height and set unevenly, pictures were drawn, posters of a disastrous performance were displayed on walls, the chairs for Grade IX were stored in the second game. The students they took a long time to bring back to their proper places, the Canadian Red Cross, which had been ordered to have transferred its headquarters to the school fire escape, and a prominently displayed notice declared that the school was unsafe, a statement in which there might even be a smattering of truth. These and other dolours resulted in the unprecedented procession of a number of high-spirited youngsters, who were led by the Chief of Police to set right the disorder and fetch the Ford car down from the platform of the Brewery building on Gaetz Avenue. However, the mischief was not of an extraordinarily wicked kind, and Halloween comes only once a year.

In a Grade XII composition of last week was found a novel touch given to a familiar prayer. The hope that mercy would be extended to the soul of a condemned criminal was altered into an aspiration that it would be given to his "sole." His neck would appreciate the leniency somewhat more on such an occasion.

Bill Parsons' dog again visited the school last week, and apparently was unwilling to leave the premises by his master to do so, but as certain graceless wretches were holding the dog by the collar, and the dog was standing at the door commanding him to go out, the disobedience was not so pronounced as it seemed. A cat also made its way into the High School rooms, and being inadvertently locked up in a bookcase by Mr. Locke remained there until made its presence known by plaintive protests.

The boys held a hockey organization meeting on Monday afternoon, and intended to take full advantage of the rink when it is opened, but so far little has not seem to be following suit. The boys have formed a general athletic association with Ernest Wells as president and Bob Simpson as secretary. Norman Bottrell is captain of the hockey section, and George Cox is vice-president. It is hoped to have a football organization over till spring, as it is not likely that there will now be any chance of football till then.

SPEAKMAN'S ELECTION
Conceded in Red Deer

In Red Deer the earlier returns showed a neck and neck race between the three candidates. The Conservative and Liberal organizations, no far as influence extended, in the powerful effort, especially in the village and towns, while the U.P.A. local organization was very spasmodic and the rural vote was very light, as the ruling power to the weather and threatening conditions. Gradually Mr. Speakman forged ahead, and at midnight he had perhaps 300 to the good, which later rural polls would increase. His election was conceded.

The figures in Red Deer—8 pollings—LaFrance 437, McKelcher 276, Speakman 292.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT IN RED DEER

Dave Garrick, of the Royal Bank staff, had an unlucky accident last week, when out with Sherrill Wolliver with their 22's. By some means or other his gun went off unintentionally and shot him in the leg. He was taken to the Memorial Hospital, where he was attended by Dr. Sanders and the bullet removed, and it is understood that he is now going on quite well, and it is not expected that the result will be serious. The accident illustrated once again how easy it is for guns to go off at the wrong time and in the wrong direction, if the utmost care is not taken in the handling of them.

A Valuable Tip

A man once complained to a broker that he couldn't get back a loan of one hundred pounds from a debtor. Being advised to sue, the unlucky creditor had to confess that he had no note or other written acknowledgment of the debt.

"Write to him, said the financier, "and tell him that you must have two hundred pounds back at once."

"But it was only one hundred pounds," objected the other man.

"Exactly," he will write back, and then you will have your acknowledgment."

FURTHER EXPERIENCES AMONG THE SOLOMON ISLANDS

(Narrated by F. de C. Callender.)

The outset of my stay on the islands was anything but cheerful. Soon after I came there the manager Young, whose place I was taking, became very seriously ill, and I myself was attacked with fever. Settled into this malady mainly by the unsatisfactory food and inferior character of the water. On the tiny island where our headquarters were most unwisely placed, there was no fresh water to be got except by the catching of rain water in the wet season, and its preservation in great metal tanks. Such water was anything but good in quality, especially late in the dry season when it was falling low in the tanks and had been stagnant for a considerable time. Not only had we when living on the island at headquarters to depend on this poor water, but the boats touching at the island from the various trading posts and our own trading parties had to take their water supply from the tanks and in order to get it had to dip it out and carry it down to the jetty in buckets. It was altogether unhealthy, and after I had recovered one of my first chances was to install a piping system which linked up all the tanks and carried the water from them down to the jetty, so that the boats could be given their water supply direct from taps. However, that came later. First came the fever. I may say at once that the manager died of it. His wife and two daughters nursed him, and a nephew, who was supposed to be a doctor—whether rightly or wrongly I do not know—also attended to him; but their efforts were unavailing, and the poor fellow died in the tropics, burial follows death quickly of necessity, and he was buried the same day as he died in a rude coffin made by the company's carpenter, the place of burial being the little island. I think I was named to struggle out of the bungalow to attend the burial service, and I was told afterwards by some of the others who were present that their mental comments when they saw me standing at the grave side was that I myself would be the next to follow the manager.

An attack of tropical fever in an out-of-the-way island, with little or nothing in the way of medical necessities available, or skilled attention, is not enjoyable. I was quite delirious, and what I remember best was that I seemed to be laying bricks—endless countless numbers of bricks—in the blazing, tropical sunshine, with no purpose or hope of reaching the end of my task. The so-called doctor was perfectly useless. He came once, spaced at intervals, and said he was too busy looking after his uncle, the manager, to attend to me. Personally I did not want his attention, which I felt was likely to be more damaging than helpful. One of the storemen, however, of the company on the island had been a druggist in Australia before coming to the Solomons, and he was able to mix me some medicine from the official medicine chest which did me some good, while he also gave me the good advice to leave the bungalow, and get out to sea in the yacht. I did so, though it took all my strength to reach the yacht, and the comparatively cool, fresh air at sea helped me, while at another of the islands I got some more medicine, which finally dispelled the fever and put me back on the road to health.

It was quite interesting work trading with the natives. It was a primitive sort of trade that we did. We did not know their language at all, and they knew only a few words of "pidgin English," so that gestures did duty to a large extent in our transactions in place of speech. One thing that surprised me was to find that whenever land was bought from the natives by the company it was always paid for in good English sovereigns. How the natives came to value a currency which they could not use among themselves, and which they had no occasion to use anywhere except in transactions with the company, I do not know, but their value for it for land purchase purposes. Most of this gold came back to the company very quickly in payment for company trading goods, and I am afraid that the natives did not always get full value for the return of their gold to the company. An old hat, a knife, and a plug of tobacco would be sold for one of these golden pounds, the profit to the company on such a sale being enormous. In addition to direct barter and to the sovereigns, there were some red beads or dried berries used as currency to a certain extent, these berries being found in the islands by the natives.

It was somewhat strange to find that fashions in appearance and in taste existed among these natives in much the same way as in more civilized communities. The men were even more addicted to personal adornment than the women. I suppose the fact that in civilized society the women are the ones who go in for personal adornment is an indication that they have not advanced so far in the scale of mental and moral evolution as men, and are nearer to the savage state. My experience in the tropics leads me to this conclusion when comparing the Solomon Island savages with modern girls. For instance, the fashion of wearing the hair among the Solomon Islanders was quite in the modern style, and some of the women wore modern female fashions. It was a sort of goliwog style, with the hair all stuffed out. It was not becoming to the simple savages any more than it is to many of the sophisticated moderns. Both men and women painted their faces, using mostly white paint to show up against their black skins, just as the modern girls use red paint to show up against white skins. The both sexes, but especially the men, habitually wore all sorts of things in their ears and even in their noses. Three or four bits of ivory, in either stick form or ring form, would be thrust through their ear lobes or their noses in spite of the fact that the doing of it must have been highly painful. The whites of fashions are thus not to be found only in modern times.

I became accustomed to the somewhat "apprehensive" atmosphere of the islands comparatively soon, and ceased to feel that it was anything out of the way to be keeping a constant look-out for treacherous attacks by individual natives or bands of them. It had, in fact, a somewhat funny side. Thus, on one occasion I wished to get some soap of natives with my camera, and one particularly fantastic looking warrior was induced to pose for me. Before he did so, he was formally introduced to me. In the Solomon Islands handshaking retains its primitive significance. The original handshake as a sign of friendship, of course, introduced because the gentlemen who are shaking hands, especially with the right hand, are temporarily at a disadvantage for the purpose of plunging weapons in one another. The whites in the Solomons, therefore, do not dislodge to shake hands with the natives. On the contrary, they do so quite readily. I had, however, my doubts of the warrior in question, just as he almost invariably had grave doubts as to whether or not my camera was some form of "evil eye" designed to make him wither away or drop dead or something of the sort. Anyhow, when I shook hands with him I held my revolver conventionally in my right hand, so that there should be something ready to dissuade him from attempting to avert the "evil eye" by strangling the bearer thereof.

The white men who maintained the scattered trading posts in the islands led a distinctly precarious existence. They lived in twos, never alone, in miniature forts of timber with palisades around them to guard against a native rush, and I imagine that they got into the habit of sleeping with one eye more or less open for emergencies. They never ventured into the bush alone, and in fact all the white settlements were on the coast, and the land bought from the natives was always coastal land and not land back in the bush. The men in the small stores traded mainly by barter, canned goods, tobacco and beads being the things most wanted by the natives, while coconuts and ivory nuts were the natives' chief products. It was interesting to find that the native fashions in beads changed just as the civilized fashion in dress colour changes. At one time they would wear light blue beads. Then a little later they would wear dark beads, and the stock of light blue beads would depreciate in value and the company's representatives in Australia would be duly informed that they need not send any more of the light blue variety for the time being. When one considers that the Solomon Islanders' clothing rarely consisted of more than a few strings of beads, it is easy to understand that the native belles had no other means of arousing the jealousy of their rivals and spending their husbands' hard-earned coconuts than by starting new fashions in beads. After making allowances for climate and a few superficial differences, human nature has changed but little in our modern civilized communities.

Strangely enough, dogs' teeth were reckoned of high value by the natives, and one trader, a German, when he found this, thought that he would enrich the company, not to say himself, by sending to Germany for a large stock of artificial dogs' teeth, which he designed to sell off to the simple natives as the genuine article. I am glad to say, however, that the natives turned out to be not quite as simple as he expected, for they detected the difference and refused to buy the spurious teeth, to the disappointment of the enterprising Teuton.

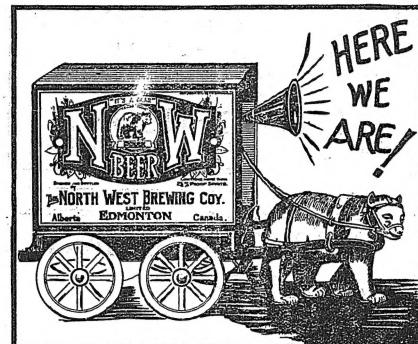

On one occasion, soon after my arrival, I was on one of the large islands when there were a number of small trading posts scattered over one another by a few miles of forest. Having finished with one of these, the man with whom I was making my visits suggested to me that instead of going to the next one by sea, we might walk through the bush to it. It was only a mile or so away, and there was a rough road cut through to it. We accordingly started and arrived at our destination without incl-dent, but when the residents in the second post saw us arrive and heard that we had come through the forest, they expressed not a little surprise and told us that we had done a very risky thing, as the chances had been distinctly against our ever coming out alive. We did not mind the experiment again, having no wish to furnish a Solomon Islander's Sunday story.

One of my colleagues, who was sharing my bungalow, had a rather troublesome experience on one occasion. We had not been long in the new sleeping room and he was roused by the sound of someone moving on the verandah. It was quite dark in the house, so that he had no means of knowing who it was, but he was always liable to have late visitors, and he thought that he was being disturbed. He went out and saw the intruder coming stealthily towards his own room, and when the steps actually reached his door he decided that it was time to raise an alarm, and he shouted to me and struck a light. I leaped out of bed and ran to his room, where we found that the intruder was a native woman known in the island as unbalanced mentally. Regularly each week when the moon was full, she went off her head and for a few days was a complete lunatic. She had cunningly eluded our native guards outside the house and got on to the verandah and thence into the house. She was armed with a knife and a small telescope, and taken away, but the incident is an illustration of the unquiet atmosphere in which we all lived.

A far more formidable episode happened on another occasion. We were cruising in the little yacht, and had on board the Australian manager of the company. We wanted to buy some land on one of the largest islands, named Meleta. When we came to the place where we wanted to buy the land, the local chief came to the yacht to discuss the purchase with us. He was magnificently attired in a state of nature with a small bag hanging round his neck. Our discussion was conducted in the pigeon English I have mentioned, and there was some difficulty in making our bargains, so that he said he must go back to land and discuss the matter with his people. He went back and within a few minutes of his reaching the shore we saw that the whole bush was alive with natives, who were evidently very much excited about something. Things began to look as if there might be trouble, and I suggested to the Australian manager that it would be just as well that we should get up and anchor. He was naturally his senior, and I, and at his suggestion orders were given to take up anchor and be ready to move. We were only about 100 yards off shore, and the engineer had just gone down to get his engines started up, when the thick bush grew right along to a great war canoe about 40 feet long and full of armed natives. Although we had been so close to the shore, we had seen nothing of this canoe, which had been lying hidden amongst some of the thick bushes growing right along the edge of the water. There were about 30 natives in the canoe, and I do not want again to see such a collection of hideous and brutal faces as theirs. They reminded me of those people whose marks which eastern people sometimes wear on ceremonial occasions. The speed with which the canoe made for our little yacht was such that there was no chance for our yacht to get really under way before it came up. Unfortunately only one other of the party and myself had our revolvers, but those we drew. I urged the local manager if it were at all possible to keep any of the natives from getting on board on any pretext and we had gathered sufficient way to leave the harbour. The canoe shot alongside, and one or two of the natives caught hold of our yacht's side and kept the two boats together. The manager at once began to talk in his broken English to the chief, who was in the canoe, explaining to him as well as he could that he did not want a number of natives on board, though he was willing to let the chief come if he wanted to talk. It looked to me as if we were certainly in for very serious trouble. The chief sprang on board, and immediately afterwards our yacht gained way, and the chief evidently persuaded his followers to let go, because they sheered off, and once we were clear of them they had no chance of catching us again, as the little yacht had quite a fair turn of speed. We therefore began to leave the canoe with its ugly crew behind us, and the chief was able to make us understand that when he returned to the shore and attempted to make his followers understand the proposal that had been made to the natives of the land, one of them had deliberately pointed a gun at him and pulled the trigger, but fortunately it had missed fire. He was afraid to go back into the canoe, and begged us to take him with us to our headquarters island, which we did, and kept him there for some time till he ventured to return to his own island. I do not know what the real cause of the trouble had been, but apparently his followers thought that he was betraying them to the white men, and were quite ready to kill him, and if they had ever got on board our yacht, they might have killed all of us too. After that incident the company ordered a couple of rifles for the yacht as an additional protection, and also saw to it that every white man on board had his revolver with him on the cruises. The thing that gave us a nasty surprise in this episode was the evidence furnished of how the forest right down to the shore could be swarming with natives and yet no sign of them which the big war canoe was got out and the speed with which it was driven towards us were all indications to me of the dangers to which we were exposed. I was told of one occasion on which a British warship was sent to one of these islands to give the natives a lesson on the folly of opposing us or using violence to white men. The ship lay off the coast a little way and sent a number of shells into the forest more or less at random. When the firing ceased, and the ship began to move off, those on board could see with telescopes that there had been a host of natives lying in the forest right at the edge of the shore. The ship's shells had passed harmlessly over their heads into the empty forest, while they lay and watched the proceedings from the forest edge, entirely unseen and unsuspected by the warship. This ill moving about the forests unseen gives the natives a great advantage over white men, if any attempt is made to send an armed expedition into the forests to punish them for anything, but, of course, it is an old story that the savage is at a great advantage over civilized troops when it comes to fighting in encumbered ground with which he is thoroughly familiar, and where long-range weapons and disciplined movements are not of much use. There are heavy penalties for the sale of firearms to the natives, but it was generally believed that German raiders had been selling rifles on quite an extensive scale. Bows and arrows, however, remained the chief weapons, and the arrows were poisoned, so that a comparatively slight wound with one of them was always liable to prove fatal. In addition to the natives the white men had to fear the attacks of mosquitoes and malaria, the former being the usual cause of the latter. Such a system as our stagnant water supply in tanks was simply asking for both mosquitoes and malaria, and one of my local reforms was to screen the tanks at the top, so as to prevent the mosquitoes getting at them. Another reform I introduced was the proper disposal of the tin cans in which so much of our food supply was taken. These cans had formerly been left lying about the beach anyhow, and becoming more or less full of rain water, were magnificent breeding places for mosquitoes. I had them all collected, taken out to sea and sunk well out, so that they should no longer be a menace to the health of the island. There was plenty of scope for small reforms of this kind, as I was more or less absolute ruler of my own little realm, and the other employees of the company recognized the fact. It was really a little unpleasant to see how as soon as my predecessor died, all the employees one after another drifted around to me and in an informal way intimated that they now recognized me as the local boss. It was something like the theory of "The King is dead. Long live the King." Only in my case I was so ill myself at the time that I had a pretty shrewd idea in my mind that they were wondering who my successor was going to be when I followed poor Young. However, as I have mentioned, I pulled through and completed my term as manager without further trouble.

Choice heifers $3.75 to $4.00; good $3.25 to $3.50. Choice cows $3.00 to $3.25; good $2.50 to $2.75; medium $2.25 to $2.50; common $2.00 to $2.25. Canners $1.00 to $1.75. Choice bulls were not selling as well this week, going at $2.25 to $2.50; medium $1.75 to $2.00; and canners at $1.25 to $1.50. Choice light calves $4.00 to $4.50, but most of the offerings were made at $4.00; common kinds at $2.50 to $3.75. Feeders, stockers—Choice feeders $3.50 to $4.00; stock steers $3.50 to $4.25; stock heifers $2.25 to $2.75; stock cows $2.00 to $2.50.

Beef—The market at Edmonton was slower this week, and demand became slack on account of the number of cattle being marketed. Choice heavy butcher steers $5.25 to $6.00; choice light $5.00 to $5.25; good $4.25 to $4.75; medium $3.50 to $4.00; common $2.50 to $3.25. Choice heifers $3.75 to $4.25; good $3.50 to $3.75. Choice cows $3.00 to $3.25; good $2.50 to $2.75; medium $2.25 to $2.50; common $2.00 to $2.25. Canners $1.00 to $1.75. Choice bulls were not selling as well this week, going at $2.25 to $2.50; medium $1.75 to $2.00; and canners at $1.25 to $1.50. Choice light calves $4.00 to $4.50, but most of the offerings were made at $4.00; common kinds at $2.50 to $3.75. Feeders, stockers—Choice feeders $3.50 to $4.00; stock steers $3.50 to $4.25; stock heifers $2.25 to $2.75; stock cows $2.00 to $2.50.

HOGS

Prices at Calgary are gradually slipping, thick smooths today being worth $10.75, with 10 per cent premium for bacon. Edmonton prices are $10.65, with 10 per cent premium for bacon; buyers talking lower levels.

SHEEP

Receipts have been fairly liberal at Calgary this week, but prices are unsteady. Delivered to the market at Edmonton, and choice lambs are worth $11.50 to $12.00.

GRAIN

Unfavorable weather conditions in the West seem to be the governing factor on the Winnipeg wheat market, and prices are gaining a little each day. During the short spell of good weather all hands were turned to trading, which has been held up again this week.

BUTTER-CREAM-CHEESE

Cream—Prices in Alberta have dropped two cents on account of light receipts. This also may be the step toward the cut in butter values which is expected. Creamery butter—No change has been made in quotations yet, but when the Australian and New Zealand shipments arrive there will probably be some change. Dairy butter market quiet; no receipts. Cheese—Market is weaker, and trading active.

EGGS-POULTRY

Eggs—Receipts are extremely light, especially since the cold weather; storage supplying most of the demand. Some of the dealers paying as high as 40c to get the new birds. Poultry—Shipments are comparatively light; old hens and cockerels, some of which are in poor shape; dealers advise holding and fattening before shipping.

HAY

Weather conditions and harvesting are keeping the market quiet. Some of the hay which is moving is of poor quality, and it seems to be very early in the season to start this. Farmers who are bringing in good loads are getting high prices.

HIDES

Market is inclined to be weaker, especially cow hides. Prices are unchanged. Horsehair values have advanced 5c on the ground.

FURS

Sale prices at New York weaker than either the auction at Montreal or Winnipeg held this week. Auctions finished until 1926. Dealers are weak.

THE 78TH BATTERY BALL

On Friday evening the 78th Battery held its annual ball in the Armouries. The hall had been nicely decorated for the occasion. Halloween lanterns covered the main lights, and on the walls were decorations including the Battery number in large digits. The programmes were particularly well done, with the usual military nomenclature attached to the dances. It is understood that these were hand-painted by Mrs. Tiberghien.

A good crowd was present, just enough to fill the hall comfortably but not to make dancing inconveniently difficult. The members of the Battery turned out in uniform, and other ex-service men also wore uniforms. Paper hats were distributed and worn with the usual fantastic effect. Balloons of varied color were also released and floated or were carried about the hall, and the usual confetti and streamers added to the color effects. Spottlights were also used, and use of attached to machine guns, but the most novel feature introduced was that on the stroke of midnight the lights went out for a few moments, and on their being turned on again an old witch was seen to have appeared in the hall with a small attendant spirit, and went round the hall inspecting dancers and decorations until the complete round had been made, when in another brief moment of darkness both disappeared. The music supplied by Bone's orchestra was excellent, as were the refreshments.

The orchestra was accommodated on a raised platform at one end of the hall with the artillery guns flanking it on each side. It should be stated that all those employed in connection with this dance were local people, and all the material employed was of British manufacture. The members of the Battery worked hard to make their dance a success, and it is pleasing to learn that a thoroughly good spirit exists in the Battery. The men are mostly young and naturally inclined to be at times a little free in their attitude towards military conventions, but the essential spirit is good, and they take their work in earnest, which is entirely as it should be.

COMEDY AT THE EMPRESS THEATRE

The comedy, "Falls, Bill!" was performed on Thursday evening in the Empress theatre to a good audience who took up most of the space available in the new re-conditioned theatre. The play is of rather a familiar type, dealing with young husbands who attempt to excuse late hours and absence from home on the bogus plea of attendance at a fraternal order, and whose fathers and mothers-in-law are either tyrants or dupes of the said young husbands. At times the dialogue was distinctly commonplace and starchy, but on the other hand there was a good deal of quite amusing fun, and the audience showed that it appreciated the performance by frequent and funny enough to deserve the performance was that of A. T. Layton as Mr. Bloodgood, a deceiving and deceived father-in-law, who was natural, enough and funny enough to deserve the amusement he evoked. The mother-in-law, that much overworked stage tyrant, was well done as such a character has a chance of being by "Mrs. Bloodgood," who, it is to be presumed in the absence of programs, was played by Miss Daisy D'Avra, but almost the funniest performance was that of the young man who got himself up as a milliner's assistant to aid his friend in deceiving the father and mother-in-law. In his male garb this actor spoke too fast and too mechanically, but the moment he appeared as a macqueroning female he began to act really well and was highly diverting and also, he said, a quite passably good-looking girl. All the players spoke clearly and quite loudly enough to be well heard, which is an excellent merit, and of the quality of staginess already alluded to, was to often present in their speeches, that may to a great extent be put down to the play and not to the players or this class of comedy always seems to abound in dialogue, which not the very finest actors or actresses could give even a semblance of naturalness to. However, it is a class of play which usually commends itself to a large number of people who want to hear laughable nonsense, even if there is not a great deal in it, and the play certainly satisfied these people. It was announced in the course of the performance that the company proposes to make further visits to Red Deer at intervals with other plays, mostly of a comedy type. This is an interesting proposal and might be quite a success, and very welcome to Red Deer people as a change from the tragedies. It is to be hoped that it will be tried and turn out well. It was also announced that members of the company would be glad to help in the production of plays by local people for charitable or public purposes, and this suggestion too may well be welcomed and made use of.

NEWS OF RED DEER
PEOPLE IN CALIFORNIA

We have received from a former Red Deer man in California news of some of the Red Deer people living there.

Over 70 old Red Deer residents met at the Santa Monica pier at the end of August for the annual reunion. A jolly afternoon was passed in meeting old acquaintances, swimming and doing the sights. It was a surprise to all present to find out what a large number of Red Deer people were resident in the district. Addresses were exchanged and a similar event looked forward to for next year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Brumpton of Santa Monica, will have the greatest sympathy of all their friends in the death of their daughter Betty, aged 2 years, on October 2nd. She had inherited her leg while playing, and an operation became necessary. She seemed to be recovering all right, but blood poisoning set in, and she could not throw off the poison.

Ar. Carwarden had a close call on October 16th, when his car collided with a truck on the Coast Highway near Santa Anna. The car was completely wrecked, but being rather head-hardened Ar. got off with a bad shaking-up and a few stitches in his head and left arm.

Mrs. Ted Graham, of Fresno, California, and Mrs. W. E. Trump, of Vancouver, B.C., have been visiting relatives and friends in Santa Monica for the past two weeks.

Mr. Dave Fryer secured a good position with an electrical firm in Pasadena, and his many friends will wish him every success in his new venture.

THE RED CROSS CHILD AT HOME

Perhaps there is no greater proof of the value of the influence of the Red Cross in the home than the recent death of a mother whose child had recently joined the school branch. Her mother said: "It has entirely changed my little girl. She was a constant anxiety to me in the smaller matters of her personal hygiene. The care of hair, nails, teeth, etc., had been the subject of much nagging before I could get her to attend to them. Now she takes the greatest pride in herself, telling me that 'a Red Cross child should be always speaking of health habits.' At her school, she has musical drill and songs with actions which refer to the morning health habits. Their instills these duties firmly into the children's minds, and in the case of my little girl she has truly worked wonders. Then, Johnnie, the young master of the house, who is only five and not yet at school, has made the acquaintance of the health fairy over the air, and carrying out in his own small way all the directions these fairy folk give under the guise of fairy tales. I assure you it is a great help to have a child ready to go to bed of his own accord at an early hour, because the Health Fairy has told him to do so. In our house we are glad to have the influence of the Red Cross in the home; it has meant for our children better health habits in their daily lives."

One of the chief reasons of a peace time Red Cross is the promotion of health publicly and privately by means of popular written health literature, available free for distribution by the Alberta Division, by lectures on the radio, by attractively featured health lessons in school branches. This program results in a better and higher standard of health in the home, and a finer quality of life and citizenship. You are earnestly asked to support Red Cross by contributing to the annual appeal during the coming month. For full information, please write to Alberta Division, Red Cross, Calgary.

ALBERTA'S NEEDY AND MOTHERLESS LITTLE ONES

Amongst the charitable institutions of Alberta none is more deserving of the confidence and support of the public than Wood's Christian Home at Olds. For ten years this institution has been giving hospitality and training to hundreds of Alberta's motherless and needy children, and the ever increasing number of applications for admission has made it impossible for the Home to measure up to the needs of the Province.

This condition of things has led the board of managers to decide to make an appeal for funds, sufficient to build six additional cottages. In this appeal meets with the generous response it deserves, the building will be started as soon as possible, and each cottage will be built to accommodate 25 children, with the present buildings, will enable the Home to take care of 200 children. A foster father and mother, chosen because of their adaptability for the work, will be put in charge of each cottage, and the policy of the Home, "To keep the children together," will be strictly adhered to.

Although started as a private institution by Mr. Wood, the property has since been turned over to a board of trustees and incorporated under the laws of the Province of Alberta. The management is under the supervision of an advisory board, which consists of representatives elected by the various organizations that give it financial support. Thus the Home is a public institution giving hospitality to children from all parts of the province and depending on the generosity of the public for its support.

The Home has the endorsement of the Legislature of Alberta, the Social Service League of Canada, the Presbyterian of Edmonton, Red Deer, Medicine Hat, Calgary and High River, the Orange Grand Lodge of Alberta, as well as many of the most prominent men of the province, as Grant-Governor Brett, Hon. Greenhill, Hon. Chas. Stewart, Bishop H. A. Gray, H. W. Woods and many others.

In reply to a letter of enquiry, Mr. K. C. McLeod, Superintendent of Dependent and Delinquent Children for the province of Alberta, wrote as follows of the Wood's Christian Home at Olds:

"This institution is doing very good work amongst our children. Mr. and Mrs. Wood are admirably adapted for the work, not only on account of their years of training in the old country, but also because of their natural aptitude for handling children. They understand Home and Home conditions as they should be. They are keeping a great many children without charge, and many more are only paying a fraction of their cost. Mr. and Mrs. Wood are very economical in the use of funds, and they provide a great deal of the sustenance of the Home out of the little farm. It is too bad they have not more land and more capital, as they could make a great institution of it. I sincerely hope that in some way they will have the means to expand and do the big work there is for such an institution to do. We send all the children we can to Wood's Christian Home for care, and always feel that we are getting the best of satisfaction."

Ralph Connor (Reverend C. W. Gordon) says of it:

"No one with the heart of a man in him will be indifferent to the appeal of your work for orphan children. It is an appeal which has in it all the elements of pity and compassion that we feel for those who are unable to help themselves, and is there anything so helpless in the world as a little child, fatherless, motherless, friendless?"

The campaign has been set for the week ending the 22nd of November, which is the 10th anniversary of the Home. Wherever collectors can be secured a canvass will be made on or near the above date. Those who fail to see the collectors and yet are interested in helping for Alberta's needy children, can send their contributions direct to Wood's Christian Home at Olds, Alberta.

Invest a few dollars in a little needy child this fall. It will pay, and pay big.

FROM THE POETS

UP AND ON

A School Song, by John Ozenham

Life is in the making here,
Hearts are in the waking here,
Mighty undertakings here,
Up and on!

We are arming for the fight,
Pressing on with all our might,
Plunging wings for higher flight,
Up and on!

Fair before us lies the way,
Time for work and time for play,
Fill the measure while we may,
Up and on!

Life and Time will not delay,
Time is running out away,
Life is Now—today, today,
Up and on!

Foes in plenty we shall meet,
Sea's courageous foot defeat,
We press with eager feet,
Up and on!

Ever onward to the light,
Ever upward to the Light,
Ever true to God and Right,
Up and on!

Up, boys! Trust me
Lies in high endeavor,
Play the game, keep the flame
Burning brightly ever.

LOCAL SUGGESTIONS

It is suggested that there might be room in town for a young people's club, where the young folks might be spent by these young folks. The idea of the club would be to supply a place where healthy amusement could be got in the way of parties, dances, and small dramatic performances. If the club were managed with intelligence and under proper control, it is thought it might put a stop to a good deal of aimless loafing in less desirable places.

It is suggested that an entertainment committee should be established in town, with representatives from the different organizations in town, and in particular a secretary to keep a record of intended dances, concerts and gatherings of various kinds, and to coordinate these as far as possible and prevent clashing of dates, and generally to promote the greatest possible amount of co-operation in this sphere.

HALLOWE'EN IN RED DEER

Spooks, witches, goblins, black cats and all their kindred associates were out in full force on Saturday to play their usual Halloween pranks. Hordes of juveniles in a variety of make-up made house-to-house canvases in doorknobs to the annoyance of some but certainly to the delight of the juvenile element. The stores downtown were not plastered as usual with soap, save in one or two instances. Taken all through, there appeared to be no serious damage done.

"Bis dat qui cito dat"—which means that a subscription paid promptly is appreciated twice as much as one paid long after it is due.

FARMING NOTES

The Fall Stock Show and Sale began yesterday in Calgary and will continue till the 6th. Special railway fares of fare and a third for the return journey are offered for this show.

The Central Alberta Farmers' Co-operative Association is reporting the shipment of five cars of cattle, one car of hams, and one car of hogs last week. They also report a great scarcity of eggs. W. J. Milne of the C.A.F.O.M.A., was out in the west on a buying trip last week.

Not much local grain is yet coming into the local elevators, but the expected heavy grain traffic continues over the C.P.R. through Red Deer, most of which is coming from east of Lacombe and Wainwright and going west over the C.P.R. route to Vancouver.

MORE BUTTER SHIPPED

Butter exports via Montreal are more than twice as heavy so far this year as they were in 1924, and the movement of butter is so far in excess of the local requirements, that it is not in the same proportions.

LARGE GRAIN MOVEMENT FROM VANCOUVER PORT

Speaking from his general knowledge of conditions, Leslie H. Boyd, K.C., chairman of the grain board of Canada, predicts that the port of Vancouver will handle at least 65,000,000 or 70,000,000 bushels of export grain during the shipping season of 1925-26.

PLANS TO BRING OUT ITALIAN FAMILIES

It is understood that negotiations are now under way for the purpose of purchasing 40,000 acres of cultivated Manitoba farm land, with the object of settling there 500 families from the province of Italy. The project is being financed by a group of banking institutions in Northern Italy, and by Volpi, minister of finance. Italy's representative in the matter, who is a frequent visitor to Winnipeg, now is Miss Italia Garibaldi.

CAR LOADINGS REACH PEAK

The rising trend in our loadings of revenue freight of Canadian railways culminated in the week ending the third quarter, when the 1925 record of 76,439 cars were loaded, more than 5,000 over the previous week and 10,379 more than the corresponding week last year. Although the number of freight cars loaded in the first nine months of 1925 is still below the corresponding 1924 total by 25,49 cars, the deficit is being rapidly made up by increased hauling of grain. Figures for the first week of October show a heavy grain load of 6,000 cars, and in the same week of 1924, and grain loading for the year is now only 25,490 behind the 1924 total. This information is included in a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

PROMISING NEW WHEAT VARIETIES

(Experimental Farms Note).

Among the numerous new varieties of wheat produced by the Cereals Division of the Federal Experimental Farms and the University of Alberta, the two varieties Garnet and Reward continue to be most promising. These varieties have been tested carefully on our Experimental Farms for a number of years, but during the past season they have been tested with other sorts such as Marquis on over 100 ordinary farms scattered widely throughout the three prairie provinces. As a result of all these tests, the varieties in question have demonstrated themselves to be much superior to the other varieties available in certain districts at least.

Garnet—Garnet is a cross between Creston and a high quality variety called Riga. Like its Preston parent, Garnet appears to be able to thrive under relatively dry conditions better than do most other common varieties of common wheat. It matures from a week to eleven or twelve days ahead of Marquis, depending on the locality and the nature of the season. In section Garnet ranks among the good yielders. Where early maturing sorts are an advantage, or where a certain type of drought prevails, this variety may excel even Marquis in yield. It is not expected, however, that Garnet will take the place of the latter variety where this is well suited to prevailing conditions. Rather is Garnet likely to take the place of such early-maturing sorts as Ruby, which sort it usually outyields by a considerable margin. It may also prove of special value in some of the drier areas. Observations recorded to date indicate that Garnet is quite susceptible to stem rust. It may escape a late epidemic of this pest, however, by reason of maturing early.

In strength of straw Garnet is fairly good, although under severe conditions it is not quite the equal of such strong-strawed sorts as Marquis. In length of straw Garnet seems to fluctuate under different conditions of moisture less than do many other varieties. Thus, under very dry conditions, it usually produces a good length, if not soon too thickly, whereas under very moist conditions it usually grows less rank than do most other varieties.

In quality for bread-making this variety appears to rank among the better varieties, although the flour is not quite so white as is that of Marquis. The question of quality will be investigated further during the com-log winter.

Reward—Reward is the result of a cross between Marquis and the very early-maturing variety, Prelude. It matures as a rule from two to four days later than Garnet, although in some places the two varieties have matured practically at the same time.

This variety is noted for its very strong straw and its fine appearing grain, which latter produces an excellent quality and color of flour. The grain is also remarkably uniform in size, a point of considerable importance to the seed grower. The weight per 100 kernels is relatively high, as also its weight per measured bushel.

While by no means rust-resistant, it nevertheless seems less susceptible to rust than Marquis. At the Experimental Farm at Brandon, in the bad rust year of 1923, Reward tied for first place in yield with the relatively resistant variety Kola. During that year the former variety weighed over 62 pounds per measured bushel, while Marquis weighed only 55 pounds at the above station.

As regards yield in general, there are scarcely enough data available at this date to allow one to more than express the opinion that in districts to which Reward is suited good yields may be expected. Under some conditions this variety may prove even outstanding on account of the particular qualities in which it excels.

Investigations conducted up to the present seem to indicate that Reward is less able to thrive under severe drought conditions than is Garnet. As a matter of fact, no new variety should be sown on a large scale on any farm before being thoroughly tested in comparison with a standard sort such as Marquis for a year or two at least.

Neither Garnet nor Reward have, as yet, been placed on the market, although it is not unlikely that the former may be introduced before next spring's seedling. There will not be a great need of Reward for at least two or three years to permit of its being offered for sale, even though its evaluation were completed. In the case of Garnet final decision as to its introduction awaits this winter's milting and hatching tests. It is expected, however, that these will be satisfactory. Should this variety be introduced this year, it is likely that a limit will have to be set as to the number of bushels any one man can purchase. The act limit will be based upon the number of applications received up to a certain date.

All who are interested in these varieties should keep in touch with the Cereals Division, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

Mark Your Bacon Hogs

Mr. Patterson is official grader for Red Deer, and all hogs from the west country are graded by him on reaching Red Deer.

We would ask all farmers to see that any hogs they think will grade Select Bacon are marked at the point of shipment.

Select Bacon Hogs must not weigh less than 170 lbs at Calgary, therefore, they should not weigh less than 180 lbs at country points. The majority of hogs that are graded Select Bacon weigh around 200 lbs.

This week, Mr. C. Stewart, Lacombe, had one select bacon out of three; Selkirk, R. Henry, Red Deer, had three select bacon out of four; and Mr. J. Kissel, Markerville, who shipped from Sylvan Lake, had five out of seven grade select.

RED CROSS DAY

A Message from his Honor the Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta, President of the Alberta Division, Canadian Red Cross.

Citizenship is a birthright of freedom and justice. With it is carried many honors and privileges as well as many responsibilities. True citizenship is the recognizing of its sacred duties, and not the living of a self-centred life, wrapped up in the welfare of self and family, oblivious to the needs of our neighbors. The sacred duties of citizenship embrace the rendering of assistance to those less fortunate than ourselves in times of distress in the form of disaster or epidemic. We must see that our pioneers in outlying districts are provided with properly equipped hospitals, and that they have the ministrations of nurses, properly qualified and adequately trained. We should see that a proper crusade of health education is maintained, so that preventable diseases will be avoided.

All these things cannot be accomplished by a single individual. They cannot be accomplished by the Health authorities, or even by legislation alone, but they can be brought about by the sympathy, the whole-hearted goodwill and the financial support of all our people enthusiastically enlisted in a crusade for better living conditions. To be of service, the support must be effectively and efficiently organized and administered. I firmly believe the Red Cross offers the most effective channel for the direction of such service.

The activity of the Alberta Red Cross in establishing and maintaining Outpost Hospitals is very commendable and praiseworthy. Already five of these institutions have been established and are rendering inestimable service to the families of the pioneers residing within the zone of their activities. They are a perfect Godsend to the women and children who otherwise would be without trained assistance during the critical period of their lives. The lives of many women and infants have been saved by the timely ministrations of the Red Cross nurse at the Outpost Hospital. These outposts act in a dual capacity, performing the functions of both a hospital and a health centre, helping to improve the conditions of those sick, and assisting in maintaining the health of those who are well.

The Red Cross is an unselfish service intelligently administered, but it requires your assistance to enable it to carry on its good work and to extend the scope of its activities into districts where they are urgently needed. In making this appeal to the people of Alberta, I do so with the firm conviction that it will not fall upon deaf ears. I appeal to you to help the Red Cross "carry on." There is a great need for funds. With the approach of winter will come the calls for help. Nursing service and outpost hospitals must be maintained, the crusade of good health must go on. Everybody can help. Every individual is small, their numbers will swell them into a great sum.

On "Red Cross Day" I want a special effort made by every community in Alberta. There are numerous ways in which funds can be raised. A community can hold a concert, a dance, a tag day, a bazaar, a sale of home cooking, or some other form of entertainment, and send the proceeds to the provincial office. An enthusiastic citizen in each community can obtain grain pledge cards and interview the farmers in their locality, who will be found only too willing to help by donations of grain. All that is needed is a real willing worker actuated by the desire to help the less fortunate within our midst. What are you willing to do? Your best?

Sincerely yours,
R. G. HRETT,
October 7th, 1925.

WEDDING BELLS

THOMPSON-GOLLEDGE
At the Baptist parsonage, by Rev. Ellis L. Jackson, October 29th, 1925, Robert James Thompson, Ponoka, to Frances Maud Gолledge, of Calgary, Alberta.

LEIGH-DAY

A quiet wedding took place at St. Luke's Church, Red Deer, at 10 o'clock on Thursday morning, the Rev. Gerald McDonald, M.A., officiating, when Doris E. third daughter of the late J. F. Day and Mrs. Day, was united in marriage to Mr. Alfred Leorne Leigh, of the Rev. Francis and Mrs. Leigh, of Galt, Ont. The bride was married in travelling dress—black and blue silk afternoon dress, with coat of black and black, and hat of black and gold. After a short honeymoon in Calgary, the young couple will return to Red Deer where they will reside on Waskasoo.

The young couple will be followed in their new life by the warmest good wishes of many friends. The bride is one of the most popular girls in the district, belonging to one of Red Deer's most outstanding families, while the groom, since his coming to Red Deer in charge of the Western General office staff, has won his way to high esteem in the community.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE RED DEER FEDERAL RIDING

Ladies and Gentlemen: I beg to thank you for the honor you have done me in again choosing me as your representative, and particularly I wish to thank those who gave time and energy in my behalf at a season when this involved real sacrifice.

I appreciate the courtesy and good feeling which has characterized this campaign on all sides, and I ask the co-operation of everyone in meeting the task which is the most difficult and complex situation with which Canada has ever been confronted.

Yours faithfully,
ALFRED SPEARMAN.

LETTER OF THANKS TO THE ELECTORS OF THE RED DEER CONSTITUENCY

Ladies and Gentlemen: May I take this opportunity of thanking all those of you who were good enough to honor me with your support at the polls on Thursday last. While the result is not what we Conservatives could have wished for, it is yet by no means discouraging under the exceptional circumstances of the contest. In view of the short time available to my supporters and myself for putting our case before the electors, in view of the strength of my opponents, and in view of my newness to public life and inevitable shortcomings, the measure of support given to me is at least as much as I had any right to hope for. If by standing on this occasion I have to some extent enabled you to give expression by your votes to your political convictions and to have our common viewpoint placed before the electors in general, I am well repaid. My only regret is that I was not able more adequately to represent the cause for which we Conservatives stand.

I may state my appreciation of the courteous hearing given to me and my supporters at our meetings throughout the constituency, as well as of the fair and sporting manner in which my opponents conducted their campaign.

Again assuring you of my sincere thanks for your generous support, I have the honor to be, ladies and gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
JOSEPH J. LAFRANCE.

I.O.D.E. LUNCHEON

The Sir Christopher Craddock Chapter, I.O.D.E., Red Deer, held a very successful luncheon on Friday, October 23, in the McBride Hotel. It was given in honor of Mrs. Marshall, of Calgary, Provincial President, who spoke of the work of the Order in the province. Mrs. Brotherhood, of Billings, Mont., National Organizing Secretary, also a distinguished guest, gave an interesting address. Mrs. Carruth, also a guest, spoke on Child Welfare, particularly what is being accomplished by the Calgary Chapter, at Sylvan Lake summer camp. The large attendance of members at the luncheon proved that the Order is enthusiastically supported in Red Deer.
